Settlement of the Microsoft case(s) NOW is in the best interest of the public and especially the people that use computers. It is particularly important to people who use computers to conduct business. I run a small business and I believe that Microsoft will develop new and improved products at a faster rate when they are free of the distractions of these legal matters.

Just a thought: What if the government had spent as much time, effort, and tax payers' money dealing with ENRON in the public's interest, instead of going after the Microsoft Corporation? How many people would be better off today?

Just a tax paying American who cares about what is right.
